Editorial (continued from p. 146)

Society might enlarge its research activities in one or more of the following areas: a clinical fellowship program to support training of an ophthalmologist in neuroophthalmology; the provision of special symposia and workshops on studies pertinent to other programs of the Society such as glaucoma and genetic disorders; provision of an orientation and educational program for a scientific writer to encourage more accurate description of research in diseases and surgery of the eye.

The symposium on glaucoma held annually at the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology meeting has been extremely successful in focusing the attention of practitioners on glaucoma and various clinical and investigative approaches to the disease. A symposium concerned with genetic disease of the eye would serve a similar function, and the committee believes the Society should provide such an emphasis for clinical ophthalmology.

Thus, after more than 30 years of support of research in blinding disease the Committee on Basic and Clinical Research has seen the federal government develop a research program that is supported as a matter of national policy. The committee has seen remarkable expansion in research programs dealing with diseases of the eye in laboratories of microbiology, immunology, pathology, and neurobiology as well as the development of major eye research institutes in many parts of the country. The members of the Committee on Basic and Clinical Research are Bernard Becker, M.D., Robert P. Burns, M.D., David G. Cogan, M.D., James H. Elliott, M.D., Everett V. Kinsey, Ph.D., Carl Kupfer, M.D., Irving H. Leopold, M.D., Warren S. Rehm, Ph.D., Robert Reinecke, M.D., and Bradley R. Straatsma, M.D.
